The Quincy Educational Endowment Fund is owned and managed by Branch County Community Foundation. All gifts will be invested and the investment returns will be distributed to Quincy Community Schools in accordance with Community Foundation's spending policy. If Quincy Community Schools ceases to exist or distributions otherwise become unnecessary, impossible or inconsistent with the needs of the community, the Branch County Community Foundation maintains explicit authority to redirect the returns of the Fund to another beneficiary without prior approval.

Leaving a Legacy

You are invited to enrich Quincy's future through an estate gift. Large charitable gifts are often a sensible way to achieve your personal goals—preserving your family name, honoring loved ones, providing for heirs, minimizing tax burdens and supporting the community you call home. Your professional advisor and the Community Foundation can provide more information. This is a perfect opportunity to establish your legacy for the good of the community and its children.

Quincy Educational Endowment Fund

a fund with the Branch County Community Foundation

Improving the educational opportunities of young people.

Supporting programs and initiatives that promote excellence in education for all Quincy Community Schools students.

Giving Back

As generations of students graduate and succeed in the world, they recognize the value of what they learned at Quincy Community Schools.

Quincy High School graduate Richard Wendorf and his wife Janet made a donation in memory of Leo and Dorothy Wendorf, to help grow the Fund.

The endowment fund allows even those of modest means to invest in our youth and have the gift keep giving forever.

Diane Godfrey, Teacher, Jennings School

The Quincy Educational Endowment Fund provides an opportunity for others to support our youth, our school, our community and make a lasting difference.

Investing in Youth

Working with youth will be like a stone thrown into a pond; the ripples keep expanding far beyond our time and place, far beyond our ability to measure or perhaps even envision.

Russell G. Mawby, former CEO
W.K. Kellogg Foundation

Classroom to Community

Creating innovative learning experiences. From exploring the universe from a science classroom to connecting to the “real world” through guest speakers, community projects, and field trips—the Quincy Educational Endowment Fund helps enrich basic education for every student.

Making a Difference

...and helping to assure each child goes out into the world equipped with the very best we can give them!

Our goal is to expand and diversify learning experiences for all Quincy students.

These funds are provided by and distributed by people from our community who are interested in promoting excellence in our school and our community.
